PRESS RELEASE

Date of issue: 10.12.15

Appointment of new Director of the Pitt Rivers Museum, Oxford

Dr Laura Van Broekhoven, Head of the Curatorial Department and Curator of Middle and South America at the Nationaal Museum van Wereldculturen (encompassing the Tropenmuseum, Volkenkunde and Afrika Museum) in the Netherlands and Assistant Professor of Archaeology at Leiden University, has been appointed as the new Director of the Pitt Rivers Museum. She will take up the directorship on 1 March 2016. This follows the retirement from the directorship of Professor Mike O’Hanlon in September.

Dr Van Broekhoven said: “It is both an honour and a delight to be joining the Pitt Rivers Museum. The Museum enjoys the highest reputation internationally - for the quality of its curatorial expertise, its extraordinary collections and galleries and as a centre of scholarship - thanks in particular to the outstanding leadership of Professor O’Hanlon. I am greatly looking forward to working with colleagues in the museum and also with academic colleagues across the University.”

Welcoming his successor, Professor O’Hanlon said “The Pitt Rivers has been deeply fortunate to acquire the exceptional services of Dr. Van Broekhoven as its new Director; I would also like to pay generous tribute to Professor Laura Peers for her own dynamic leadership of the Museum as interim Director.”

Professor Anne Trefethen, Pro-Vice-Chancellor for the Academic Services and University Collections, said: “I am delighted that Dr Van Broekhoven will be joining us at what is a pivotal moment, both for the Pitt Rivers and the University’s other museums and collections. All of these outstanding collections are now working – individually and collectively – to extend their contribution to the delivery of the University’s strategic aims and I greatly look forward to Dr Van Broekhoven joining us in this shared endeavour.”

ENDS

Notes for Editors

- The Pitt Rivers Museum is one of Oxford’s most popular attractions, famous for its period atmosphere and outstanding collections from many cultures around the world, past and present. Admission, exhibitions and most events are FREE.
The Pitt Rivers Museum was founded in 1884 when General Pitt Rivers, an influential figure in the development of archaeology and evolutionary anthropology, gave his personal collection of some 30,000 items to the University on condition that a museum was built to house the Material, and that a post was created to lecture in anthropology. Today the collection numbers some 600,000 items, and the Museum remains an active department of Oxford University, doing and supporting research and teaching in archaeology and anthropology.

Press Contact

Louise Hancock, Pitt Rivers Museum Marketing and Media Officer
01865 613017 louise.hancock@prm.ox.ac.uk